

Fellowships and Grants for Political Science Graduate Students

Department of Political Science
University of Iowa

Compiled by Sara Mitchell,
Director of Graduate Studies

Last update: October 2006

Introduction

This guide lists sources of funding for doctoral study. The Political Science Department encourages students to seek external support for dissertations and other projects, just as faculty members do. Research awards help you cover the costs of primary data collection, library use, and write-up. They are important external signals of success too.

Usually, students prepare research proposals for funding during the winter term of the second year and the summer between the second and third years. They submit these proposals to external agencies typically in the fall term of the third year in order to carry out primary research in the fourth year. Missing the deadlines adds at least a year to the time-to-degree.

Important Resources

Steps for obtaining external grants are provided by the Division of Sponsored Programs (DSP) at <http://research.uiowa.edu/dsp/main/?get=gradprogrant>. Graduate students must set up an account in the University of Iowa Research Information System (UIRIS) in order to apply for external grants. The DSP has a full time graduate student that can assist you with this process and help search databases for relevant funding sources. The Division of Sponsored Programs also provides free copying, faxing, and phone usage to graduate students who are seeking external funds.

Spencer Foundation Dissertation Fellowships for Research Related to Education

Deadline: [October]

Fellowships of $20,000 are awarded each year to individuals whose dissertations show potential for bringing fresh and constructive perspectives to the history, theory, or practice of formal or informal education anywhere in the world. Although the dissertation topic must concern education, graduate study may be in any academic discipline or professional field. Not intended to finance data collection or the completion of doctoral coursework, but rather to support the final analysis of the research topic and the writing of the dissertation.

Population Council Social Science Fellowship
Deadline: [Dec. 15]

Supports predoctoral, postdoctoral research, or mid-career training in the population field (with residencies available for the two latter). Predoctoral fellowships are for one year of research. Applicants must be Ph.D. candidates. Applications requesting supports for either the dissertation fieldwork or the dissertation write-up will be considered. Approximately ten awards will be made for this category. Fellowships will be awarded for advanced training in population studies, including demography and public health, in combination with a social science discipline, such as economics, sociology, anthropology, or geography. Proposals must deal with the developing world. Strong preference will be given to applicants from developing countries who have a firm commitment to return home upon completion of their training programs. Fellowships can cover fieldwork (with budget) and dissertation write-up. Monthly stipends, tuition payments, related fees, transportation and health insurance are provided. Amounts vary based on type of fellowship and place of study.

Foundation Center

The most comprehensive resource on funding sources- from foundations to corporations, with a heavy focus on the United States. The Foundation Center had libraries open for public use in Atlanta, Cleveland, Washington, D.C., San Francisco, and New York. The site includes the NNG Common Grant Application and "A Proposal Writing Short Course," which offers brief guidelines for writing inquiry letters and proposals as well as templates for the narrative and budgets. Philanthropy News Digest newsletter available online. Searchable databases on grant makers and grants are available for purchase on CD-ROM, FC-Search. You can purchase books entitled International Grantmaking and other resources for non-US organizations.

Fundsnet

An alphabetical list of donors to health, largely in the United States. The list is not searchable by keyword, and many of the donors only contribute to small health organizations in their own communities, but it is an adequate place to begin browsing. I would suggest using Foundation Center resources for any grant searches if at all possible.

Proposals for Funding

An excellent, walk-through from program and mission design to budget preparation. The site is a bit difficult to read, but the content is simple, easy to understand, and takes the grant-writer step-by-step through the process of drafting an application. The audience is action-oriented community empowerment organizations in the US and abroad.
